Famous Whistleblower John Kiriakou Faces Media For The First Time As Panquake Ambassador

For the first time since the recent PANQUAKE Reveal famed CIA torture whistleblower John Kiriakou is stepping forward to share with the media why he's become the Panquake Ambassador.

Panquake is a new crowdfunded social media platform focused on user privacy and freedom of speech. Early stage development was supported by thousands of small donors. Now the application is so far advanced that Panquake needs to reach a wider audience to fund the infrastructure to launch this unique product. That's where Kiriakou's experience, network and credibility comes in.

John is enthused by the features of Panquake and said: "I encourage you strongly to take a look at Panquake. Acquaint yourself with the website. Figure out what you can do with Panquake and what Panquake can do for you because I really believe this is the future. I can't wait until it is live because that's where I'm going to be spending my time. That's the social media platform that I want to be involved in."

Panquake Chief Security Officer, Sean O'Brien said: "I could not be prouder to be collaborating on Panquake with the brave, intelligent and principled John Kiriakou. His wisdom and determination will accelerate Panquake even further."

Initial feedback to the Panquake Reveal shows users clamoring for access to the platform. The appointment of Kiriakou as Ambassador, a man who has risked much to act in the public interest, speaks to the ethos of Panquake.

Kiriakou and O'Brien will begin appearing on a range of platforms in the coming days and weeks to educate users on how Panquake will transform their social media experience.
